I am a San Antonio native, a 2005 graduate of Central Catholic High School, and a 2009 graduate of Rice University. After an extended trip to the East Coast for law school (University of North Carolina '13 – Go Heels!**), I returned to San Antonio with my wife and daughter in 2017 and am now a labor & employment litigator at Schmoyer Reinhard, LLP. Having settled in to practice here (and, more importantly, having FINALLY gotten my daughter out of diapers!), I'm excited to shift my focus to serving the young lawyers of San Antonio in whatever capacity I can. SAYLA was crucial in acclimating me to the local bar, offering me valuable and meaningful pro bono opportunities, and introducing me to several attorneys I now count as friends, and I would love the opportunity to support its mission and the next crop of new attorneys who will call San Antonio home.

**Fact: You can't miss the NCAA tournament if the NCAA tournament gets cancelled.
